Unassertive supervisors increase risk to the organization

Assertiveness for Supervisors: Improving Relationships with Employees

- Improve a supervisor's ability to be assertive
- Help supervisors find the balance between being "pushy" and a "push-over."
- Advance personal and organizational goals on time
- Improve teamwork, trust, respect, and relationships with supervisees
- Avoid aggression in supervision or being a "people pleaser"
- Improving accountability of employees

Both employees and the organization depend on supervisors to deliver honest input, advance their goals, protect their interests, and develop a positive work culture that encourages trust and cooperation. To accomplish this, the supervisor must be a skillful communicator. Often the most difficult part of this communication is being assertive. Assertive supervisors know how to get things done without alienating others or creating drama. They motivate others to reach their full potential. It is an art and a skill that comes with practice. The bottom line: Being assertive is good for everyone, and this is why assertive supervisors are trusted and respected.
